Harry Griffin and Jay Rogers, the last named entering the game for the first time since his recent illness, tried to win for Richmond vesterday; the rest of the crowd, with one or two exceptions, tried to win for Roanoke. The majority carried the day, and the score

Richmond scored twice. There might have been more scores for Richmond but for that same woeful lack of hitting ability that has been evidenced for several weeks. Roanoke scored five times, but after the most careful scrutiny of all that happened only one run but after the most careful scrutiny of all that happened only one run can be accounted for legitimately. Working on this basis, the final ONE BAD INNING result should have been two runs for our side as against one for the visitors. But this is not a story of what might have been.

Harry should have flung himself to glory, and the Colts back into second place by all the rules of the game. Yet, by that perversity of fate which rates pitchers by the number of games won and lost, Harry's record receives a blemish and he is counted a loser.

It's very well to talk about poor pitching and all that sort of thing, and we are not, by way of offering excuses for the weakest hurling staff in the league, but no pitcher could have the league, but no pitcher could have won for the locals yesterday behind a cefense that fell with a crash that should have been heard downtown. First, let's tell about how the brace of tallies was annexed by the Griffmen. Frank Dobson and Strain collaborated to annex the first, and it was in the opening hypergraph. Frank allowed. NEWPORT NEWS SCRIBE PICKS HIS FAVORITES

Newport News, Va., August 28.—Permit me space to add to your ever-growing selection of a star team of the Virginia League, a team that I think is far superior to any that might be picked from the six clubs making up the Boatwright circuit, excepting, of course, those players who have been sold and who must report to the majors at the close of the Virginia League season. Here is "my" team:

Right field—Tennant, Portsmouth.

Shortstop—Gondolfi, Newport News.

Centre field—Mattis, Roanoke.

Centre field—Smith, Newport News.
Second base—Goalby, Roanoke, and Laughlin, Petersburg.
Pitchers—Gardin, Roanoke; Carter, Newport News; Barton, Newport News, and O'Brien, Portsmouth.
This team is considerably different from any that I have seen picked, and yet, in my judgment, it is the strongest combination in the league. Take the outfield. Tennant, Mattis and Smith are the fastest field—with the circuit, and all three are hitting 300 or better, and all of them are good throwers.

Take the infield. It would be airtight so far as fielding ability goes, and all four of these players are around 300 as hitters, with each one knows the game from every angle, and would furnish a great defense and a slashing offense.

Welcher is casily the star catcher of the game, having a wonderful whip, a good head and being a hard hitter. Joe Laughlin would make a capable substitute, having a ploge throwing arm, and being a fair sticker and knowing the game from every angle. As to the pitchers, Gardin has proven his worth, as have Carter and Barton. O'Brien. Portsmouth.
